In La'o Hamutuk's vision, the people of Timor-Leste, women and men, of current and future generations, will live in peace and contentment. They will control a transparent, just and sustainable development process which respects all people's cultures and rights. All citizens will benefit from Timor-Leste's resources, and will accept the responsibility for protecting them.

Background

La'o Hamutuk ("Walking Together" in English) is a Timor-Leste non-governmental organization established in 2000 which analyzes and reports on development processes, which includes policies and actions of international institutions and of Timor-Leste's Government. La'o Hamutuk facilitates communication between people in Timor-Leste and decision makers, as well as establishing links with other countries to explore alternative development models.

In 2014, Timor-Leste continued to be one of the most petroleum-export-dependent countries in the world. About 78% of Timor-Leste's GDP and 89% of state expenditures come from oil revenue. From 2013 to 2014, Timor-Leste's state expenditure increased by 28%.

This dependency on non-renewable resources has, in our analysis, caused Timor-Leste to begin to fall into the 'resource curse'. In 2014, the government continued to neglect social services and the domestic non-oil economy. La'o Hamutuk continues to urge government and development partners to prioritize agriculture, fishing, tourism and small industries, as well as investing more in health, education and sanitation, as these are the foundation of our nation's future. These efforts can help Timor-Leste escape from the resource curse and move into an economy which will support every Timorese person,

Also, during 2014, Timor-Leste faced many challenges such as a lack of transparency and accountability, individual greed, corruption and interference in the judicial system. La'o Hamutuk has played an important role in providing fact-based research, analysis and advocacy, as part of the struggle to ensure rights and benefits for all the country's people.

Program activities in 2014

As a research institute, we offer independent and reliable data and analysis for Government, Parliament, civil society, community groups, journalists, academics, consultants, diplomats, international agencies and others. We are a public resource center, providing information on many issues and Government development policies, and use these means to disseminate our findings.

Writing and giving interviews to journalists and researchers

La'o Hamutuk often writes for local media and briefs or talks with local and international journalists. During 2014, we were quoted or cited in non-La'o Hamutuk publications more than 110 times, as listed in Appendix 2.

Public meetings, presentations, testimony and trainings

As in previous years, La'o Hamutuk continued to be a public resource center by responding to requests from people inside and outside Timor-Leste to give presentations or provide training. More than 35 of these are listed Appendix 3, and many are on our website.¹

Notable examples include a public meeting on fiscal sustainability with presentations from La'o Hamutuk and the Ministry of Finance. We also gave several presentations to Parliament on fiscal issues. As a result, Parliament Committee C's recommendations and some of the Parliamentary debate on the state budget reflected La'o Hamutuk's suggestions.

La'o Hamutuk was also invited to present to a Chatham House conference in London on Emerging Oil Producers and to a UN ESCAP meeting in Bangladesh on Least Developed Countries, demonstrating international respect for our analysis and expertise. Finally, throughout the year, we collaborated with Monash University researchers on agriculture, poverty and development strategies².

Website, blog and email lists

La'o Hamutuk's website <http://www.laohamutuk.org> contains a wealth of information and analysis in Tetum and English, often linking to public or leaked documents. We post many items not readily available through other sources. We also post our statements, presentations, submissions and articles.

Although traffic on our website was 25% higher during the first half of 2014 compared to January-June 2013, we do not have statistics for the entire year as the site was hacked in August and we did not detect it for several months. The hacker did not damage any of our pages and the site continued to function normally, but he/she posted additional pages to our server, which inflated traffic figures.

Many web pages serve as "briefing books," with background information and analysis from La'o Hamutuk and others, as well as links to related documents in several languages. The following are some of the key topics which we created or significantly expanded during 2014; many other pages were also updated:

Our bilingual blog <http://laohamutuk.blogspot.com> highlights upcoming events and new information. During 2014, we posted 27 entries and people viewed pages 24,260 times on the blog. Appendix 6 lists key postings.

La'o Hamutuk also circulates our materials to email lists (especially ETAN's 3,500-subscriber "east-timor" list) and information sharing networks.

Bulletin

In past years, La'o Hamutuk produced regular Bulletins with in-depth articles and editorials in Tetum and English. We did not publish Bulletins during 2014, but distributed much information through media, presentations and the internet. We hope to resume the Bulletin during 2015.

Radio Program

After being off the air for three years, we resumed producing and broadcasting our Tetum-language Radio Igualdade program on nationwide state radio and community radio stations in Baucau, Maliana and Maubisse. The twelve programs we produced in 2014 are listed in appendix 5.¹⁷

Research, Monitoring and Advocacy

Natural Resources

Petroleum Dependency

Timor-Leste relies on petroleum exports more than every other nation except South Sudan, Libya and perhaps Equatorial Guinea, and has a rentier economy which relies on the easy money from selling oil and gas from the Timor Sea. However, these reserves could be used up in less than five years.

During 2014, La'o Hamutuk continued to monitor the extraction of undersea oil and gas and associated activities, including contracting, taxes, revenue management, transparency, policy decisions, and their impacts and benefits. We have long been the leading organization in Timor-Leste providing facts and recommendations to decision-makers and civil society about ways to address the environmental, social, political and economic dangers of petroleum dependency.

We continue to remind every available audience that petroleum dependency is a major challenge, which must be addressed by developing our non-oil economy, reducing imports and making state expenditures more efficient and sustainable. Many organizations, policy makers and journalists have requested La'o Hamutuk's expertise, including visiting IMF teams, UNTL/CNIC for a televised debate on economic resilience, Presidential staff, and many diplomats, advisors and journalists.

In July, we represented Timor-Leste civil society organizations to the Timor-Leste Development Partners Meeting on the economic strategic sector, and we urged that more attention be given to sustainability and equity. Many policy makers have accepted our ideas about the urgent need to develop the non-oil sector, and this discussion is far more widespread than when La'o Hamutuk began pushing it several years ago.

Greater Sunrise field and maritime boundary disputes with Australia

In 2013, Timor-Leste brought Australia to international arbitration and to the International Court of Justice (ICJ) in an effort to compel them to respect Timor-Leste's right to a maritime boundary halfway between the two countries. These proceedings, which have implications for the ownership of and development strategies for the Greater Sunrise oil and gas field, continued during 2014, with a lot of public attention. La'o Hamutuk remains the principal source of diverse information and objective analysis on Timor-Leste's sovereign rights, especially on maritime territory.

Much of the global media coverage of the ICJ process relied on La'o Hamutuk, and we compiled documents and coverage.¹⁸ When the Northern Territory Bar Association held a conference in Timor-Leste, we helped pass strong resolutions on Timor-Leste's boundary rights.¹⁹ We also collaborate with the Australian Timor Sea Justice Campaign and other activists around the world.

Timor-Leste's Petroleum Ministry invited La'o Hamutuk to a three-day workshop with the U.K. Hydrographic Office, where we joined with others from media, government, security forces and civil society to try our hands at delineating maritime boundaries.

Tasi Mane south coast petroleum infrastructure project

The Tasi Mane Project is a multi-billion dollar petroleum infrastructure project that the Government has prioritized since 2009. Since then, La'o Hamutuk has questioned its economic viability and warned that it will have serious social, environmental, and fiscal impacts on the entire country. The project has been managed by national oil company TimorGAP since 2011. Many people were displaced and their land cleared in Suai during 2013-2014, and we supported local communities trying to protect their rights. After La'o Hamutuk urged Parliament not to spend additional money, the Government reduced project appropriations for 2014 to $46.3 million, down from $139 million in the 2013 budget.

Petroleum institutions

In 2014, the National Petroleum Authority (ANP) and the Ministry of Petroleum and Mineral Resources held five public consultations across the country on draft Technical Regulations for offshore oil and gas operations in Timor-Leste. The ANP declined our request to share the draft documents before the consultations, but we encouraged people to participate, provided oral and written testimony, and made materials available.²⁰

After the Court of Appeals' Audit Chamber released a critical audit report on the ANP, we translated and summarized it, bringing the report to public attention.²¹ Many of the Court's findings echoed concerns La'o Hamutuk has raised since the creation of the ANP in 2007.

Timor-Leste established the TimorGAP National Oil Company in 2011, and the company is legally required to publish an Annual Report within six months after the end of each year. However, TimorGAP had not produced a single Annual Report by mid-2014, and La'o Hamutuk had heard about possible legal violations, maladministration and corruption. In August, we formally asked the Audit Chamber, the Anti-Corruption Commission and the Provedor to investigate and audit TimorGAP's activities and finances. Our open letter received a lot of attention and serious consideration by the Court. TimorGAP finally published its 2011-2013 Annual Reports in mid-December, but much information is still not available.

In May, The British Royal Institute for International Affairs (Chatham House) invited Charles Scheiner to a conference on Emerging Oil Producers in London, which was also attended by representatives of TimorGAP.

Environment

Timor-Leste enacted an environmental licensing law in 2011, but it has rarely been enforced. La'o Hamutuk participated in consultations on implementing regulations.²² Although the Government had not published the list of projects which had applied for environmental licenses, we made this information public.²³ We also researched major projects built in violation of the law, which prompted the Environment Directorate to write to their owners about their legal obligations.

Economy and state finances

Petroleum Fund, transparency and sustainable budgeting

Oil and gas provide nearly all state revenues and comprise 78% of our GDP. Income from these non-renewable resources is channeled through a Petroleum Fund which contains US$16 billion. Our webpage on the Petroleum Fund continues to be the global reference.²⁴

In October, Juvinal Dias was sent by the Core Group on Transparency to the Publish What You Pay regional meeting in Yangon.

Also, we helped draft the Core Group on Transparency press release on keeping detailed information in the Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI) report.²⁵ We gave trainings and briefings to journalists, diplomats, activists, students and Parliamentarians.

We were the main researcher for International Budget Partnership's Open Budget Survey and Budget Tracker, and Juvinal Dias attended a training in Washington. We also worked with the Global Integrity Survey on their first report on Timor-Leste.

We continue to be the primary source on Timor-Leste's State Budgets.²⁶ Although the budget process has become less open since 2012, La'o Hamutuk has continued to write letters, present to parliamentary seminars and interact with many policy-makers, journalists and citizens. Many of the 29 recommendations in Parliament Committee C's report on the 2014 Budget reflect La'o Hamutuk's concerns. For example, the Committee advised: "Don't take more than Estimated Sustainable Income (ESI) from the Petroleum Fund in 2014, and don't take more than is needed during 2013."²⁷ When Parliament discussed the budget in a closed-door committee, we published the key amendments they were considering. In October, when Government asked Parliament to revise the 2014 Budget Law, we translated and analyzed the process.

Regarding the proposed budget for 2015, we were the only civil society group invited to present to Parliament's seminar in Maubisse.²⁸ We also wrote two unsolicited submissions to Parliament and observed some of their non-public hearings.²⁹

We continued to refine our projections of how long petroleum will be able to finance state activities.³⁰ Charles Scheiner wrote a chapter "Can the Petroleum Fund Exorcise the Resource Curse from Timor-Leste?" for a book to be published by Australian National University.³¹ When ANU published a two-page summary for their In-Brief series,³² Timor-Leste's Government issued an eight-page response.³³ La'o Hamutuk's expertise in the complex state budget is widely recognized, and we were hired or invited to give more than 30 related presentations during the year, including a week-long advanced budget training for civil society.³⁴

We view the budget from a gender perspective and, in October, Juvinal Dias participated in an Asia-Pacific regional workshop on Gender Responsive Budgeting in Bali, organized by UN Women.

After the World Bank and UNDP published inaccurate data on Timor-Leste's economy, we had several meetings with them, including with the Chief Statistician for the UN Human Development Reports in New York, and we expect future reports to be more accurate.

UN ESCAP invited Charles Scheiner to present at a conference of Least Developed Countries in Dhaka, Bangladesh about why Timor-Leste has not been able to improve its human capital and economic diversity, in spite of having ample money from oil and gas.³⁵

Megaprojects: ZEESM, borrowing and Public-Private Partnerships

For the last five years, La'o Hamutuk has tracked the planning and construction of several multi-hundred-million dollar mega-projects, including power plants, petroleum infrastructure, highways, ports and airports. We have observed that many of them are ill-conceived, poorly designed, over-budget, environmentally destructive and legally dubious.

The plan to establish a ZEESM (Zona Especial de Economia Social de Mercado) in the Oecusse enclave was initiated in 2013, although we did not see ZEESM as a priority for La'o Hamutuk at that time. However, in mid-2014, we decided to research ZEESM because the rapidly growing enterprise has national implications for economics, rule of law and democracy. We collected and analyzed documents, collaborated with people and NGOs from Oecusse, and published a well-received web page.³⁶ Later in the year, Parliament unfortunately amended the 2015 State Budget to transfer $82 million to the Oecusse Autonomous Regional Authority with no accountability; we will continue to monitor the project.

In 2012-2014, Timor-Leste signed loan agreements for $206 million with the World Bank, Japan and the ADB for road projects, and we continue to raise questions about the wisdom of these and future loans.

We continued to follow the evolution of the proposed Public-Private Partnership (PPP) for the huge container port in Tibar, analyzing the tender process. The International Finance Corporation (IFC) had also been working with the government on a PPP for Dili Airport, but IFC left the project after the Government decided to build a larger airport than we (and eventually IFC) thought was advisable.

Agriculture

Food sovereignty

Although most Timorese families live from farming, we continue to import much of our food from abroad. Timor-Leste's non-oil balance of payments deficit is about the same as our non-oil GDP. This will be impossible to sustain after the oil is exhausted, and people will starve if local agricultural and industrial production has not markedly increased. La'o Hamutuk believes that Timor-Leste's own capacity should supply our food, and we encourage productive, sustainable agricultural practices for local consumption, rather than export-oriented, high-technology farming.

We continued to monitor the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries (MAF) and Australian aid program "Seeds of Life," exploring the benefits and disadvantages of so-called "improved" seeds. We also continued to participate in consultations on the Food and Nutrition Security Policy led by MAF and the UN Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO), writing a second submission,³⁷ briefing civil society and participating in the Validation Workshop for the final draft, which incorporated recommendations from La'o Hamutuk and HASATIL. We also participated in the consultations on the "Zero Hunger Challenge" initiative.³⁸

HASATIL asked La'o Hamutuk to coordinate their advocacy team, and we represented the network at meetings of KONSSANTIL (Timor-Leste National Council on Food Security, Sovereignty and Nutrition). We helped HASATIL write a press release for World Farmers' day, promoting Food Sovereignty. In February Mariano Ferreira represented HASATIL in Yogyakarta-Indonesia, presenting on economic development and sustainable agriculture.

Since 2013, we have worked with researchers from Monash University (Australia) to better understand rural poverty in Timor-Leste, giving suggestions for their research and presenting at two seminars in 2014.³⁹

For the First Conference on Adaptation to Climate Change, we circulated a statement to the media, pointing out that unsustainable development in rich countries is the root of the problem.⁴⁰

We wrote a submission to Parliament on the 2015 State Budget, calling on MAF to support organic agriculture, and pointing out the dangers of sacrificing people's wealth in the name of development.

Land

Since 2009, La'o Hamutuk has been the principal source of information, advocacy and education regarding proposed land laws. We continued to monitor and lobby on the land law process, advocating for vulnerable and poor people's rights to land.

We testified to the Prosecutor and to the Police in the land-dispute between Alfredo Da Costa and Pedro Carrascalão, giving evidence of human rights violations by Mr. Carrascalão and his security guards against Mr. Alfredo. The Court has not yet decided the case, and we will continue to follow the process.

We wrote a submission to the President on the proposed decree-law to transfer community property to the Suai Supply Base project, pointing out that the law violates people's rights and the Constitution.⁴¹ Unfortunately, the President promulgated it anyway.

Governance and democracy

Justice for past crimes

Fifteen years after Timor-Leste emerged from Indonesian occupation, no effective processes have held perpetrators accountable for crimes against humanity committed in Timor-Leste between 1975 and 1999. La'o Hamutuk continues to engage with international agencies to encourage ending impunity, which can best be done via an international tribunal established by the UN Security Council. We work both on our own and through the Timor-Leste National Alliance for an International Tribunal (ANTI).

In November, Inês Martins was invited to the Impunity Watch conference in Bangkok on transitional justice and the re-establishment of war victims' dignity.

Media Law

When Parliament was about to enact a media law with grave consequences for freedom of expression, La'o Hamutuk raised public concerns that the law's impacts would fall on everyone, not only "professional journalists." We urged Parliament to hold additional hearings with a broader range of participants, and they scheduled a second week of hearings at which La'o Hamutuk and others testified.⁴²

La'o Hamutuk sees the law as a threat to our own work (nobody other than accredited journalists would be allowed to disseminate information to the public), and we mobilized Timorese civil society and media freedom advocates worldwide, including Human Rights Watch and Amnesty International, to oppose it, which led to coverage in Time magazine, The Economist, the Guardian and many Australian and Pacific media.

David Robie, a communication studies professor from Auckland University of Technology who had volunteered with La'o Hamutuk in 2013, helped mobilize and educate people across the Pacific on this threat to media freedom.

Parliament passed the law without considering the serious Constitutional issues, so we organized an open letter co-signed by about 30 people and organizations urging President Taur Matan Ruak to veto it.⁴³ In response, the President's office held a three-hour discussion with about 50 representatives of media and civil society. The President asked the Court of Appeals to advise him on four articles in the law, and the judges determined that three of them violated the Constitution, so he sent it back to Parliament for revision. Although Parliament made a few changes to the law before re-enacting it, it still contains several unconstitutional provisions, one of which was reaffirmed in a second court opinion after the law was re-passed.

The law came into effect in December 2014, although it has not yet been implemented. Some politicians say that it only applies to commercial and state media, although the actual wording of the law indicates otherwise, and there could be a future law regulating expression by civil society and nonprofit media. La'o Hamutuk has decided not to seek journalistic accreditation, although we will continue our public education activities, as well as following further efforts to restrict freedom of information and speech.

Rule of law and independence of the judiciary

In 2010, Timor-Leste began reviewing past oil company tax returns and identifying irregularities, directing the companies to pay back taxes. Several companies paid around $300 million in 2012 to avoid escalating interest and penalties, but they have taken Timor-Leste to court and international arbitration to reverse these decisions. La'o Hamutuk has gathered some information about these processes, but much is not public and there is widespread confusion and disinformation, including official unhappiness with how some of Timor-Leste's advisors, lawyers and judges have handled the cases. We continue to serve as a principal source of information on this complex issue.⁴⁴

In June 2014, U.S. FBI agents arrested former Ministry of Finance advisor Bobby Boye on charges of defrauding Timor-Leste. Norway had hired Boye as a petroleum tax adviser here in 2009, and he was later paid directly by Timor-Leste. Boye had been a main motivator of Timor-Leste's efforts to collect overdue taxes from oil companies. As reported in Australian newspapers, the "uncanny accuracy" of La'o Hamutuk's 2010 article about tax collection efforts prompted oil companies to investigate his background.

After earning the confidence of Timor-Leste's leaders, Boye created a false company, arranged for it to get several contracts from Timor-Leste for revising tax regulations, and then received more than $3.5 million of Timor-Leste's money. As we later found out, Bobby Boye has a long history of criminal and questionable financial activity, and a due diligence check would never have allowed him to work here.

⁴² Our comprehensive coverage of the media law process is at <http://www.laohamutuk.org/misc/MediaLaw/14MediaLaw.htm>; our submission to Parliament is at <http://www.laohamutuk.org/misc/MediaLaw/LHsubLeiImprensa19Feb14en.pdf>

⁴⁴ More information is at <http://www.laohamutuk.org/Oil/tax/10BackTaxes.htm>

We published our research⁴⁵ and urged U.S. prosecutors not to plea-bargain the case away,⁴⁶ and we continue to monitor the prolonged court process in the USA.

In Timor-Leste, little has been done to determine if anyone else was complicit in Boye's fraud. However, many polemics have begun to blame the incompetence of other internationals for losing some of the tax cases. In October, the Government ordered the termination of the contracts of judges and legal advisors from Lusophone countries who worked in the courts and anti-corruption commission. Although the Chief Judge defended the independence of the judiciary under Constitutional separation of powers, the abrupt firing of eight advisors created chaos throughout the judicial system. The ensuing debate about judicial independence ignored the specifics of the tax cases, but La'o Hamutuk worked publicly and quietly to protect the Constitution, and the controversy was unresolved at year-end.⁴⁷

Solidarity and human rights

In solidarity with the people of West Papua, we organized an event for West Papua national day which included the screening of a film which was attended by activists, NGOs and students in Dili.

With the HAK Association and human rights activists from Australia and the Netherlands, we planned a 2015 Human Rights Film Festival across Timor-Leste to share global experiences of human rights abuses and re-energize struggles for rights, accountability and democracy.

Before the July 2014 Summit of Portuguese-Speaking Countries (CPLP) in Dili, we wrote to President Taur Matan Ruak, opposing the admission of the Spanish-speaking, oil-cursed kleptocracy Equatorial Guinea into CPLP.⁴⁸ Many people in Equatorial Guinea are imprisoned without trial, tortured, disappeared, and banned from exercising democratic and political rights. We collaborated with human rights activists from Equatorial Guinea, CPLP countries and elsewhere when the dictator arrived in Dili. We continue to be concerned about Timor-Leste's growing entanglement with questionable governments and businesses in CPLP, especially in the petroleum sector.

When Israel attacked the people of Gaza-Palestine in July, we organized a solidarity event with other human rights activists.

Networking

To share information, strengthen advocacy and reinforce local and global civil society movements, La'o Hamutuk often joins with coalitions or networks. During 2014, we worked with the following:

Timor-Leste coalitions

Rede ba Rai (Land Rights Network)

Rede ba Rai includes more than 20 NGOs, unions and community groups across Timor-Leste. It supports grassroots people to set the agenda on land issues through popular education, monitoring evictions, mobilization, action-research and lobbying. La'o Hamutuk plays a leading role in strategy, analysis and public relations.

Core Group on Transparency

La'o Hamutuk continues to work with the Core Group on (budget) Transparency (CGT). In 2014, we drafted the CGT press release on EITI, shared our views on the State Budget.

National Alliance for an International Tribunal (ANTI)

La'o Hamutuk is one of the most active members of this coalition of Timor-Leste human rights NGOs who work to end impunity for crimes committed during the 24-year Indonesian occupation. We collaborated with ANTI on several statements and actions during 2014.

HASATIL (Sustainable Agriculture Network)

HASATIL includes more than 40 NGOs, community groups and the agriculture faculty of the National University of Timor-Leste, working to strengthen sustainable agriculture. HASATIL is intimately linked to MOKATIL (Timor-Leste Peasants' Movement). La'o Hamutuk plays a leading role in mobilizing HASATIL members and strengthening their advocacy.

International Coalitions

Much of La'o Hamutuk's research and advocacy also relies on informal partners in other countries. These are a few coalitions we relate to more formally:

International solidarity and human rights organizations

La'o Hamutuk works closely with the U.S.-based East Timor and Indonesia Action Network (ETAN), the Timor Sea Justice Campaign (Australia), TAPOL (U.K.), Focus on the Global South, Amnesty International, Human Rights Watch, the Center on Housing Rights and Evictions (Cambodia), Indonesian Association of Families of the Disappeared (IKOHI, Jakarta), KontraS Institute and many other organizations and coalitions. We help make their work more effective and responsive to the people of this country.

OilWatch

OilWatch includes organizations in tropical forest countries that resist oil industry activities and the resulting underdevelopment, environmental damage and social degradation. La'o Hamutuk joined OilWatch in 2002. During 2014, we visited JATAM, a member of OilWatch, in Indonesia to discuss Timor-Leste's draft Mining Law.

Publish What You Pay

Publish What You Pay (PWYP) is a global civil society campaign for transparency in oil, gas and mining revenues. It has 800 members from 50 countries, who call for laws requiring companies and governments to disclose all payments and revenues from mineral resources. La'o Hamutuk is a member of PWYP. In October Juvinal Dias participated in a PWYP meeting in Yangon on EITI. We also collaborate with Transparency International, Revenue Watch, the Natural Resources Governance Institute, the International Budget Project, Global Integrity Report and Jubilee Australia.

Organizational situation

During 2014, two new researchers joined us, Cristina Ximenes Belo on economic and natural resources and Maximus Tahu on agriculture, although we decided not to continue with Cristina after her three-month probationary period. Our continuing staff include Alexandra Arnassalon, Adilsonio da Costa Junior, Juvinal Dias, Mariano Ferreira, Celestino Gusmão, Inês Martins, Odete Moniz, Charles Scheiner, three security people and one cleaner. At the end of 2014, we recruited Pelagio Sarmiento who will start work in 2015. We continue to seek qualified and motivated Timorese women to work with us. Celestino Gusmão faced a personal problem and since October he has been working from outside Dili. Appendix 7 has brief biographies of our staff and Advisory Board.

We hosted a Timorese intern, as well as a researcher from Japan studying land issues in Timor-Leste. We will continue to participate in such programs with universities and others who are interested.

During 2014, we broadened our knowledge and capacity in many ways:

- ★ Inês attended a three-week fellowship course at the University of California Berkeley USA on Environmental Leadership, courtesy of The Asia Foundation.
- ★ Juvinal attended a three-day training for Open Budget Survey researchers in Washington.
- ★ Adilson attended a three-day dialogue forum in Manila, Philippines on development serving the global common good, organized by John. J. Carroll Institute on Church and Social Issues and paid for by Misereor.
- ★ Adilson attended a training on Human Rights and International Mechanisms organized by the UN Human Rights Advisory Unit.
- ★ Juvinal attended a two-day training in Bali on "Gender Responsive Budgeting" by UN Women.

- ★ Celestino continued to attend Lorosa'e English Language Institute.
- ★ Several staff participated in trainings held by La'o Hamutuk on a variety of issues.

In December, we evaluated our work and designed our 2015-2017 Strategic Plan, developing our Annual Action Plans with La'o Hamutuk staff, Board and friends. We met often with members of our Board.

During 2014, we received support from Misereor and the Embassy of Norway in Jakarta (via Hivos) for the first time, and we reached an agreement with The Asia Foundation to provide funding from 2015. We maintain our longstanding policy of not accepting contributions from institutions with a significant vested interest in Timor-Leste. We also increased our earned income by being paid more than $14,000 for providing analysis, trainings and briefings.

We published our audited financial and annual report for 2013,⁴⁹ as well as our six-month report for the first half of 2014.⁵⁰

Results of La'o Hamutuk's work during 2014

Although the preceding pages describe many results of our work, this section lists a few of the most important concrete outcomes.

- ★ Broader consciousness of Timor-Leste's fragile non-sustainability. La'o Hamutuk's analysis that Timor-Leste's oil and gas resources could be spent within 10 years was widely discussed inside and outside Government, and by many institutions. Several Members of Parliament have recognized our analysis on this issue.
- ★ Wider discussion on the media law. During 2014, Timor-Leste enacted a controversial Media Law, and the involvement of La'o Hamutuk raised many discussions and concerns, slowed the process, and increased awareness among journalists, the public and human rights organizations. Our website is the principal source of information about the Media Law.
- ★ Improved data on Timor-Leste's economy. Following our suggestions, the UNDP will correct errors on GDP figures on Timor-Leste in its Human Development Report, and the World Bank will correct inaccurate data in its World Development Indicators.
- ★ Increased recognition and use of our work. During 2014, local and international television, newspapers and radio frequently cited La'o Hamutuk's information and perspectives. We were invited to present to meetings of the UN, academic conferences, Parliament, embassies, international financial institutions, aid agencies, INGOs and others. When researchers and managers visit from afar, they usually meet with La'o Hamutuk.
- ★ More effective volunteers across Timor-Leste. As a result of briefings by La'o Hamutuk to international volunteers with Austraining, the Red Cross, Engineers Without Borders and Australian Volunteers International, they are able to work more productively.
- ★ Recognition and outreach through academia. The 2014 book published by the Timor-Leste Study Association includes three papers from La'o Hamutuk researchers on maritime boundary, fiscal sustainability and land issues. Australian National University published a two-page piece by La'o Hamutuk, "In Brief 2014/29: The 'Resource Curse' in Timor-Leste".⁵¹ A few weeks later, Timor-Leste's Ministry of Finance posted an eight-page response on their website.⁵²
- ★ Widening the scope of discussion. Our fact-based input to public processes on critical issues, such as the Timor-Leste and Development Partners Meeting, environmental legislation, state budget and finances, agricultural policy, the maritime boundary controversy, judicial independence and fiscal sustainability brings diverse, people-oriented perspectives to the debate, often widening the discussion.

- ★ Building others' capacity. Local and national NGOs, Parliament Members and researchers, veterans, development partners, political parties, journalists, academics, activists, agency staff, citizens and others deepen their understanding due to La'o Hamutuk presentations or publications.

With our donors, we established specific indicators to quantify some results from our work, as follows:

Appendix 1. Financial report

All amounts are specified in United States dollars. La'o Hamutuk's fiscal year is the calendar year.

The organization has a flat wage structure; both local and international staff received take-home salaries of $600 dollars per month during 2014, plus a "13th month" in December. All staff receive benefits that include health insurance, some of which is self-insurance funded from a 'Health Reserve' below. International staff receive one return airfare from their home country, as well as a 'readjustment allowance' of $200 for each month worked up to the end of the first year, payable after they finish working with La'o Hamutuk. Staff members who must move to Dili to work at La'o Hamutuk receive $200/month toward house rental costs.

In order to preserve La'o Hamutuk's independence, we maintain our policy of not accepting contributions from institutions with a significant interest in Timor-Leste: the UN and its agencies, the World Bank, ADB, IMF, major multilateral and bilateral donors to Timor-Leste, the Timor-Leste Government, and transnational corporations operating here.

From 2006 through 2013, three donors supported nearly all of La'o Hamutuk's activities. However, Trocaire (Ireland) and Development and Peace (Canada) left Timor-Leste in 2013. Hivos (Netherlands) made an exception to their policy of not funding an organization for more than ten years (they supported La'o Hamutuk from 2001 through 2014), but will no longer provide funding from their own sources.

In 2014 we received funding from two new donors: Misereor (a German Catholic agency) and the Norwegian Embassy in Jakarta, funding which is being managed by Hivos. Although our contract with Misereor is only for 2014, we hope to continue the partnership. Our contract with Hivos (on Norway's behalf) is for 2014-2015, and we also expect it to be renewed after that.

In July, La'o Hamutuk staffer Celestino Gusmão attended the War Resisters' International conference in South Africa. Although this had not been in our budget or work plan, Development and Peace provided $4,000 from their small grants discretionary fund to make it possible.

The Asia Foundation paid all costs for Inês Martins to attend an Environmental Leadership Training at UC Berkeley, USA. Most costs for La'o Hamutuk staff to participate in conferences and trainings in Washington, Manila, Bangkok, London, Yangon, Dhaka and Indonesia, as described in the narrative report were covered by the hosts or other sponsors.

Balance sheet

This table indicates our total cash and bank account balances at the start and end of 2014, amounts of money set aside for specific purposes and from particular donors, and unrestricted money available for general operations.

⁵³ This is a self-insurance fund for medical expenses for staff and their families who do not have corporate insurance.

⁵⁴ The Sustainability Reserve is to replace and repair computers, motorcycles and other capital assets.

⁵⁵ The Operational Reserve includes approximately three months' worth of expenses, established to avoid cash flow problems. We borrowed from this fund during the first half of 2014 due to late transfers of funds, but replenished it during the latter part of the year.

⁵⁶ This fund was established to build and furnish La'o Hamutuk's new office in 2011. The balance is being applied to repairs and equipment for our building.

⁵⁷ Donors who have withdrawn from Timor-Leste or have a different budget year from ours transferred money in 2012 for later expenditures. We used $23,000 of this during 2014 and will carry over $7,000 to 2015.

Revenues

The following table shows income received by La'o Hamutuk during 2014. As discussed above, La'o Hamutuk has contracts with Misereor and the Embassy of Norway in Jakarta, and both provided general support funding during the year.

During 2014, we spent $23,000 which departing donors had provided in 2012 to support La'o Hamutuk's transition to new funding sources, but this is not shown on the graph.

In March, La'o Hamutuk received an in-kind gift from FOTI-Timor-Leste (a U.S. government anti-corruption project which has now finished), for which we had provided several trainings. They donated a photocopy machine, refrigerator, camera, shredder, filing cabinet, toner and other office supplies, with an estimated value of $8,500.

Expenditures

The table below and graph at right show the money budgeted and spent by La'o Hamutuk during 2014 for different aspects of our work, totaling $130,585.

As we had not secured a third new general support donor during 2014, we tried to keep costs down, which is why almost all expenditure lines are lower than budgeted.

Personnel costs are the largest component because the research, analysis and advocacy that form the core of our work rely on our human resources.
